Next February 13th, Epigmenio Ibarra brings to Cadena Tres a story of power and seduction, which according to its creators intends to escape from the classic prototype of TV series in order to tell a story about politics, power and crime.

Among other subjects, Infames will treat the struggles to be able to govern a country, in addition to reveal to some extent how things happen, and who permits them to happen from high positions.

Money-laundering, the hands behind the power, and criminal operations are also present in this story, which stars Ximena Herrera, who through her character “Lola Medina,” provides a portrait of a psychologist and her role in the obscure structures of corruption in present-day Mexico.

In this respect, Epigmenio Ibarra, the creator of the series, ensures that the dates of the presidential elections will coincide with this program that will analyze what happens in the Palace.

In fact, the fictitious story itself has a backdrop of the elections and their consequences provoked by the launching of candidacies and government positions.

In addition, women will play a very important role within the development of the plot, since it shows how female characters manage everything behind the scenes in the Department of the Treasury.

The cast includes Luis Roberto Guzmán, Vanessa Guzmán, Lissete Morelos, Eréndira Ibarra, Claudia Ramírez, Miguel Ángel Muñoz, and Carlos Torrestorlja. They will appear in Channel 28 on February 13th at 9 PM.
